The Wonderful Growth in Dundee Place

Has been a surprise to many of the oldest citizens here. Those who have seen Omaha grow from a small town to the strong and magnificent city it now is did not think twelve months ago that the western part of the city would take shape and develop at such a marvelous rate. Now everything points to the west, where the beautiful hills overlook the thickly settled portions down town. The pure and healthy atmosphere is noticeable immediately Dundee Place is entered; the air is free from disagreeable odors and smoke, which are objectionable in many parts of Omaha.

The ground is rolling from one end of Dundee Place to the other, thus affording the proper undulation to produce the best drainage, in consequence water, after heavy rains, does not lay on the ground and become stagnant, as is known to be the case in many of the best localities in Omaha.

If you live in Dundee Place you will have good health.
If you buy in Dundee Place you will make money.
If you own property in Dundee Place your surroundings will be the best.
If you want a house in Dundee Place, and have not the time to build, the contractors on the ground will show what they have for sale.

If you want to build a nice house, and have not sufficient money to spare at present, we will make you a liberal

COURT-MARTIAL PROCEEDINGS.

Two Witnesses Emphatically Deny That the Piquant Lady's Veracity Was Questioned in the Quaker City.

Didn't Tell Lies. The Fletcher court martial resumed the examination into the conduct of the colonel yesterday morning, the prosecution offering evidence in rebuttal. Charles J. Thomas, a livery stable keeper of the Quaker City, and an uncle of Mrs. McFarland, was first called, and testined that the reputation of his niece for truth and veracity was good, and went on to say that her general moral character was also good. Upon cross-examination the witness said that he didn't know that Mrs. McFarland was unusually talkative. She was a bright and vivacious little creature and a warm friend of those whom she liked.

"You have a brother in the Philadelphia tax department, have you not!"

"Yes." "You don't know what he might have said about Mrs. McFarland!" "No, but I should make considerable al-Swance for anything he might have said."

"Do you know Mr. Pierson!" "Very reputable gentleman, is he not?"

"Do you know what he might have said about Mrs. McFarland!"

"Do you know Mr. Early?"
"Yes." "Reputable gentleman, isn't he?"

"You don't know what he might have said about Mrs. McFarland!"

"Do you know what Mrs. McFarland's conduct was in the city of Omaha last June?" "No, sir."

"She might have been guilty of the grossest misconduct for all you know, sir!"

"She might, yes." "You don't know what places she visited

A member of the court arose to ask the object of the inquiry into Mrs. McFarland's conduct and moral character. The counsel for the defense said that the witness in his direct testimony had volun-teered information upon this point, and had thereby opened the way for these inquiries.

The court, however, ruled that the examination must be confined to her reputation for truth and veracity. The counsel said he had no further questions.

"You may state what occurred at the interview between you and Mrs. McMullen."
Counsel for defense again interposed an objection, which was overruled.

The witness proceeded to answer the question. "Mrs. McMullen said that the colonel was better pleased with Mrs. McFarland during her last visit than ever before, and that the only difficulty they had was a little quarrel on the last morning of her visit."

The next witness called was Horace F. Weeks, a Philadelphia lawyer. He testified that he had known Mrs. McFarland for fifteen years, and that he moved in the same society in the city that she did. Her reputation for truth and veracity, he said, was good and he never heard it questioned.

Upon cross-examination the witness said he

After luncheon Captain Dempsey was re called, and his attention was directed to the norning of the 19th and the conversation relative to the dogoart.

"At that time," said the witness, "I was sitting upon Colonel Fletcher's doorstep and I distinctly heard him say, "You d—n liar and thief, you have been taking things out of the house that don't belong to you, and I have been to be the control of the house that don't belong to you, and I have been to be the control of the house that don't belong to you, and I have been to be the control of the large that the accordance. have every reason to believe that the accused addressing his remarks to Mrs.

fied that on the morning of the 19th of June Colonel Fletcher's coachman came to him and said that the colonel was at the Millard in case he was wanted. The witness said that he asked the man if he had overtaken Colone: Fletcher on his way to town, and the coachman had answered yes.

They are black-haired, brown-haired, golden-haired and flaxen-haired. There are vivacious ones and languishing ones, snappy, mild, round-eyed, long-eyed and spectacled. There are Kates and Janes, Gretchens, Marguerites, Lillies, Roses, Floras and Mary Anns. In fact, they re-present every conceivable type of femining stateliness plumpness hugableness and lovin ness, and he would be fastidious indeed who could not find an ideal as the long line files out of the goor at recess. PARKER THE PENMAN.

He Is Arraigned in Judge Berka's Court and Tells His Story. Charles Parker, a sixteen-year-old boy was arrested Saturday night for forgery and arraigned before Judge Berkas yesterday afternoon. A continuance was granted un-til Wednesday at 3 p. m. The boy says be the Diamond pool room. He wrote the checks, passed them on the various parties, and gave the man Walter one-half the profits. The boy went to Austin's shoe store on Thirteenth and Howard streets and bought a pair of shoes, tendering a check for $12 and receiving $10.25 change. The same game was played on W. R. Bennett & Co. and the shoe store in Boyd's opera house building, The checks were signed "C. S. Potter" and "E. F. McCartney." They were on the Omaha, Commercial and Nebraska National banks.

The boy did not seem to realize the gravity of his position. He asked the reporter if he could give bonds and get a chance to work and repay the money he had obtained. He stated that the report that he had been forced to get money dishonestly because his father whipped him for not bringing home more money, was not true. His eyes filled with tears as he said he had the very best of fathers, who allowed him to do as he pleased.

Parker also stated that he had never hung around banks in his life, and had no idea how checks were drawn up until shown by the man Walter. Charles Parker, sr., the boy's father, is a hackman living at 1606 Cass street. He says the boy has been employed at the new natatorium on Howard street, and has been re-ceiving $5 per week. Mr. Parker states that he told the boy that as he was now old enough to earn money he ought to contribute something toward the family purse. Since that his son has been giving him $1 per week regularly. He was not aware that the boy was in the habit of frequenting saloons or pool rooms until the developments of the past few days, as he was compelled to be away from home most of the time. His family consists of himself and two children, this boy and a girl, his wife being dead.

NEBRASKA BEE KEEPERS. They Are Urged to Make a Suitable

State Exhibit. FRIEND, Neb., August 12.—To the Bee Keepers of Nebraska: The state fair is drawing near and the success or failure of our annual bee and honey exhibit is simply questioon of whether we, as individuals, will take hold and aid in swelling the exhibit this year. The premium list in this department has been greatly revised and enlarged for the coming fair and is meeting the approval of bee-keepers of the state, so far as we have been able to learn. Hundreds of our eastern friends are arranging to visit our coming state fair. A wrong impression has long existed as to whether honey is being pro-duced in this state or not, and it behooves us to join in exhibiting the quality as well as quantity we are producing. In the past no favor asked for has been refused this department by the office of the state board of agriculture. All: packages in-tended for exhibition in this de-partment will be carefully cared for, entered in their proper class and placed on exhibition, and returned to the owner if expressed prepaid to the "Bee and Honey Department, State Fair, Lincoln, Neb." I shall be on the grounds both day and night shall be on the grounds both day and night from the commencement of the fair until its close, and the last article placed on exhibi-tion is cared for, and to those who desire to place articles on exhibition, as well as those who come to view the large number of sweet things we, as bee keepers, are producing in this state, I desire to say that my time is yours. Hee keepers who visit the fair are coordially invited to make this department yours. Bee keepers who visit the fair are cordially invited to make this department their headquarters during their stay at the great show, and our aim shall be to make their stay as pleasant as possible. Entry blanks, premium lists, or any further information will be furnished promptly on application to me, at this place, or to Hon. R. W. Furnas, Sec., Brownsville, Nebraska.

REMINDS ONE OF OMAHA. Howa Respected Citizen Was Treated

by Norfolk's Marshal. Norrolk, Neb., August 9 .- To the Editor of THE BEE: Last Saturday the people of this city were horrified by one of the most brutal and disgraceful scenes ever witness in this part of the country. The following are the particulars by an eye-witness: Mr. James Gray, of Norfolk Junction, came up in his buggy, hitching his horse in front of A. Poswatk's blacksmith shop. He went about his business, returning at the end of an hour or so to find his horse and buggy gone. After looking about considerable he met Marshal O'Banion driving the rig down the street at a lively gait. Mr. Gray at once took possession of his horse and naturally expressed his sentiments at the naturally expressed his sentiments at the unwarranted liberty of O'Banion in appropriating the property without his permission, yet indulging in no abusive language beyond demanding pay for the use of his rig. Then O'Banion pounced upon his victim like a buildog, striking Mr. Gray with his fist (in the back of his neck), and as the unfortunate man turned, seemingly to learn the cause of the attack, the brute seized him by the throat and drawing his billy started by the throat, and drawing his billy started with his prisoner for the office of the police with his prisoner for the office of the police judge, several blocks away, shamefully beat ing and choking the poor man all the while. All this was without the slightest cause or provocation, as Mr. Gray did not once offer to resist or remonstrate. One thing was noticeably strange O'Banion was heard to say between the blows and jerks, "Take that, d-n you, I have had it in for you for two years." To cap the climax his honor, the police judge, fined the prisoner $8.70. Mr. Gray demurred and the amount was quickly cut down to $4.75. A BREEZE FROM OREGON.

An Omaha Man Captures a Western Debtor After Three Years. "He put up a dollar three years ago, but he hasn't done anything since." Such is the burden of a petition flied in the district court late yesterday afternoon. To be more explicit, Thomas F. Hall, a local real estate dealer, owned one-half interest in an Oregon milling plant of composite character. It comprised saw, grist and planing departments, with various little side lines. In October of 1886 Mr. Hall sold one-half his interest to David Eccles for $9,062. Mr. Eccles paid him a dollar to hold the bargain, and promised to pay the balance some other time. He hasn't done it yet, and gives as a reason that he bought another ingives as a reason that he bought another in-terest—that of Mr. Ramsey—for a great deal less money, and consequently didn't want Mr. Hali's quarter. Mr. Hall swallowed his disgust, and has continued to swallow it at regular intervals for the last three years. But yesterday was his day at bat and he im-proved the opportunity.

But yesterday was his day at bat and he improved the opportunity.

The forenoon was well spent when into his office there walked no less a personage than lar. Eccles, who cheerily agreed to call again that afternoon to straighten things out. But he didn't call, and Mr. Hall proceeded to file his suit, claiming the original $6.000 with interest at 10 per count for three $9,062 with interest at 10 per cent for three years, the whole amounting to $11,780. Then he also caused the sheriff to serve the necesoregon. That is to say, the papers were and will deliver as issued and placed in the hands of an officer.
